About Getting into Society

What Will Keep You Out

An evident desire to break in hurriedly.
An attempt to buy social position.
A lack of good sense, of good breeding, or self-control.
An unfortunate disposition.

What Will Get You In

The proper introductions.
Attractive qualities of mind and disposition.
A knowledge and practice of social conventions.
A certain amount of leisure.
Family affiliations.
Influence (a social "pull.")

What Will Make You Popular

Tact.
Wit, when not unpleasantly pointed.
Charm, the subtle kind that appeals to men, and at the same time propitiates women.
Graciously dispensed hospitality.
Graces of character and heart.

When In Society

Use all rules of etiquette to suit the occasion.
In the case of a breach of etiquette, consider the source.
Never betray consciousness of an attempted social slight.

Correct Conventions and Etiquette Up-to-Date

The Calling Card

The name of a girl should be engraved below that of her mother, for a year at least, after she has entered society.

When the space permits, residence numbers should be spelled.

A widow may retain her husband's Christian name, if she pleases. Some of the ultra fashionable women in New York have dropped their husband's Christian names from their cards and put no address upon them.

A man's card should be nearly twice as long as it wide, smaller than a woman's in proportion. The name should be printed in full without initials, with the prefix "Mr." and should bear the address of his home or his club or both.

When making the first call of the season, a married woman leaves two of her own and two of her husband's cards, another of her own and three of her sons, if there be any young ladies in the house.

At subsequent calls she need not leave her husband's card, unless he has received an invitation.

Calling

THE TIME TO GO

When you go a-calling,
Never stay too late.
You will wear your welcome out
If you hesitate.
Just before they're tired of you,
Just before they yawn,
Just before they think that you're a goup
And wish that you were gone—
While they're laughing with you,
While they like you so,
While they want to keep you,—
That's the time to go!

—By Gelatt Burgess, in "More Goups."

When a Man may Call

A man may call any afternoon, from five until half past six o'clock.

No gentleman should call upon a lady except at her invitation. A fortnight is the usual interval between the invitation and the call.

If unable to call in the afternoon, a man may call in the evening, the fashionable hour being nine o'clock.

Early in the season a man should leave his card upon all his acquaintances, if he desires to be included in social affairs.

A Message for the Hostess

In case the caller desires to leave a message for the hostess, who is not at home, he should be offered by the servant, a pad of paper, daintily covered and kept for this express purpose.

A Tea or a Reception

A five o'clock tea takes place at that specified hour in the afternoon. Tea, thin bread and butter, together with fancy crackers or little cakes are served.

If the refreshment is more elaborate the tea then becomes a reception.

A High Tea

In cities a "high tea" takes the place of the Sunday evening dinner. It is both a pretty and fashionable entertainment.

House Parties

The giving of house parties is a fine art of which the English are considered past masters.

The clever host and hostess at a house party knows when to LET THE GUEST ALONE. The hostess need not be present at breakfast, nor at luncheon, but must appear at dinner and at tea in the afternoon.

The guests should be given a sense of freedom combined with a knowledge that their comfort is being looked after.

The amusing man and the clever woman are two necessary factors.

Mourning Etiquette

No person in mourning for a husband, parent, brother, sister, or child should be seen at a concert, dinner, a party or any place of public amusement before the expiration of three months. After that one may go to a concert, but not before six months have elapsed may one attend a dinner or party, while for one year there should be no formal visiting nor gayety at the house. The person who does not go into mourning need not observe these rules, but it is obligatory upon the wearer of mourning to respect its etiquette.

Invitations and their Answers

An invitation to dinner should be issued in the name of the host and hostess.

Invitations to a ball, a dance, a tea or a garden party should be in the name of the hostess alone.

It is never proper for a young lady to invite a gentleman to come to her house, either to call or to dine in her own name.

How to Acknowledge the Wedding Invitation

Those who cannot attend the wedding should send or leave their cards on the day of the wedding or soon after.

Regret an Invitation to an Afternoon Tea or Reception by Sending Cards

In general, it is always safe to err on the side of politeness in responding to any invitation.

To persons in mourning, send invitations out of compliment, after the expiration of one month after a death.

Etiquette of the Wedding, Before and After

The betrothal should be announced by the family of the young girl. An informal announcement may be made by notes written to the intimate friends and near relatives.

It may be formally announced in several ways; the most popular being at a dinner given for the purpose. At the conclusion of the dinner the father of the prospective bride rises and proposes the health of his "son," the young man whom his daughter is to marry.

The engagement ring is not worn until after the announcement. It is in best taste when it contains but one stone.

The Wedding Journey

A long wedding trip is no longer favored by fashion. It is now the custom, in smart society, to choose a country place for a quiet two weeks.

The Widow's Marriage

When a widow remarries, it is not considered in good taste for her to wear a white gown. Her gown should be of some pale becoming shade, but never white.

Congratulations

Never congratulate the bride. One should offer best wishes to the bride and congratulate the bridegroom.

New Eldorado Springs Hotel

Ready for Throngs This Summer

THE New Eldorado Hotel at Eldorado Springs opened its doors to the public May 30. This hotel is one of the most complete and up-to-date houses of its kind to be found at any of the Colorado summer resorts. It is finished throughout in mission style, and is located on a bluff from which point a most magnificent view is obtained of the Rockies. The site overlooks the resort grounds and beautiful South Boulder canon.

Eldorado Springs will this year be brought closer to Denver than ever by the completion of the Denver & Interurban line, which will afford quick service at reasonable rates between this city and the resort.

After June 1 it will be possible to step on a car at Fifteenth and Arapahoe Streets and be carried direct to the gate at Eldorado Springs.

The completion of the New Eldorado Hotel also places Eldorado Springs in line with the best Colorado resorts. The cuisine will be first class in every particular, and special attention will be paid banquets, private dinner parties and the like. Sunday dinners will also be a feature and it is expected that the new hotel will prove a most popular place during the summer months. The Denver offices of the company will be moved June 1 from the present quarters in the Mack Building to the New Ideal Building, where one of the large store rooms on the Seventeenth Street side has been leased.

The Albany Hotel, 17th and Stout Streets

MY DEAR OLD BOB:—

Here I am in Denver, a mile high—the Queen City of the Plains, and if I knew any other titles I'd put them all on—for it is the greatest ever.

Guess you'll think I've had a change of heart since you saw me last—when I told you that I was coming West and did not expect to have anything to do but write letters.

Well now Bob, what would you expect to find way out here? Well that is just what I expected—and now—but I'll have to begin at the beginning.

Soon as I got to Denver I began to concede things in favor of the West—sunshine makes you do that. Then I looked for a good hotel. Went up town to one that was said to be first-class. It was good enough—but nothing like what you and I are used to at home. That night I felt good and lonesome, so I got to talking to a man and asked him why they did not start a real up-to-date hotel for Eastern fellows—even if the Western ones did not want one. "Seen the Albany?" Asked the man (remember the name, Bob, for it is going to figure a lot in this story of my life). I did not get a chance to answer, for just then I was called to the telephone. Some one wanted to talk to me. It was "Bessie." Yes, the same girl I joked about before coming out—the one I expected would be like the heroines of Western novels—swear and shoot like a man. She had a nice voice. I liked it as soon as she spoke. Said she had my note and asked me to call.

I went up that very night—now I'm not going to go into details—but as soon as I saw her I knew I had met The Girl. She's so different from any other, so natural, so charming, so pretty, but I promised not to describe her, didn't I?

Asked her to go to a show the next night. After the show I wanted to take her some place to eat, and when I asked where, she said "Albany." "Albany?" I said; "where have I heard that name before?" Well, we went—and do you know I had the queerest sensation of my life when we entered that hotel. I felt just as if I had stepped from Denver into the heart of New York City. There was the same laughing crowd, the pretty decorations and lights, the music—Oh! Bob, you don't know how it seemed to find it all right here, when I thought I had left it thousands of miles away.

"Why, I had no idea—." I began, and Bessie laughed and said, Denver was pretty up-to-date, but this was the first good restaurant that had ever been a success in the town. That night we ate in the "Colonial Room." We sat beside a fountain—a real one just like those in New York. An orchestra was playing some dandy music, and all around the birds were singing (guess they were real ones too). The room was all decorated with roses and vines. Well, for me it was a case of "the time, the place and the girl." Before we left I had made an arrangement to meet her there for tea the next afternoon.

I was at the Albany good and early the next day—waiting for my Western girl. Had a chance to observe Denver society—for the elect were all out drinking tea and listening to the music of a harpist. I got quite interested just looking around at all the people, and Bessie took me by surprise when she did come. After tea we strolled into the Vineyard Cafe—another place in this same hotel—and there had a nice little talk all by our lonesomes with no one near—that is as far as we seem to be able to get away from people—for it is always thronged with people morning, noon and night.

It was pretty nearly a week before I could persuade Bessie to go out again—she said she did not want me to "rush her." I could hardly wait for the show to be over—for I got to thinking about that Albany Hotel. She was pretty glad too, I guess, when I suggested that we go there. "Let's go to Bohemia tonight," she said, and I agreed. Over the door was a sign which read "Bohemia, the Land We Love." It was the same story, Bob, with variations, and crowds of people—dandy supper and fine music—all very gay with just the proper shade of the conventional so that it was all right to take your best girl there. We could not get the table I wanted—one in a little room by itself—for I had some important things to say to Bessie—but I decided to wait, and then I decided something else too. "Bessie," I said, "I am going to move down here tomorrow; the Albany has all the other Hotels in Denver skinned a mile." So I am here Bob—and since I have made my headquarters here a whole lot of good luck has come my way. I met some fellows who went into that deal with me and we are going to make good—and Bob, you must arrange to get away by fall. I want you to act as my best man. It will be a quiet little wedding—Bessie and I want it that way—but there will be a dandy little wedding supper afterwards in one of the private rooms of the Albany. The scene of our romance, you see, will also be the chosen place for the happy ending.

Let me hear from you soon, old fellow—

BILL.
